PLANTING AND CARE OF DORMANT ROSES

As soon as bare root roses are received, they should be trimmed, both roots and tops, cut off the tip end of the roots 1/2 to 1-inch, cut out all broken roots, cut the tops back to 8 to 10 inches above the bump, cut out the small brushy limbs, this should leave 3 to 4 good heavy limbs. As soon as the plants are trimmed, place them in a bucket of water (a tablespoon of any good fertilizer mixed in the water is good). Plants can stand in the water 4 or 5 days without damage.

In planting, dig the hole ample in width so the roots do not touch the sides, and deep enough so the bump where the top was grafted will be covered at least 2 inches.

Fill in good soil around the roots so hole is three-fourths full, then settle the soil with water. After water has settled, complete filling the hole, pressing the soil down tightly with your foot.

After planting is complete, tie kraft paper around the tops, or cover the tops with a paper-sack, this keeps the tops from drying out until growth starts.

Don't forget to water the plants every week!

Don't forget to start spraying or dusting as soon as foliage is full grown!

Don't forget to fertilize each plant once each month!

(One teacup of fertilizer or G & O Rose Food for each plant.)
